1 Purpose

This file inventories the official references consulted during the information-gathering phase for AutoLISP / Visual LISP specification work.

It is intentionally source-oriented rather than normative.

4 Main Conclusions from the Source Corpus

- There is no single vendor-neutral AutoLISP / Visual LISP standard document comparable to the Common Lisp HyperSpec.
- Autodesk’s documentation corpus is the closest thing to a normative reference for the core language.
- BricsCAD explicitly targets AutoLISP compatibility, but also extends the language/runtime significantly.
- Version changes matter, especially for:
 - Unicode behavior,
 - Visual LISP / ActiveX availability,
 - AutoCAD LT support,

- BricsCAD VLE and optimizer features,
 - BricsCAD packaging, namespace, and vertical APIs.
- Any implementation that aims at compatibility needs dialect and version switches, not a single undifferentiated behavior model.
